INSTITUTIONAL HISTORY: For more than 175 years, Vermont College has served as a pillar educational institution in Vermont, serving thousands of students from across the country. From its beginnings as Montpelier Seminary to its illustrious history as Vermont Junior College and Vermont College, the institution has provided opportunities for students of all disciplines to pursue their educational goals.

In June 2008, Vermont College of Fine Arts (VCFA) purchased the historic Vermont College campus and three MFA programs from Union Institute & University, which had owned the campus since 2001. GRADING SYSTEM: At the conclusion of each semester, students and their faculty advisors and/or artist-teachers complete final evaluations of the students' work throughout the semester. If a student's work has been successfully completed, a final assessment of CR (Credit Awarded) is recorded in the student's academic record, and full credit is awarded. If a student's work has proven to be inadequate, a final assessment of NC (No Credit) is recorded and no credit is awarded. If an enrolled student withdraws during the refund period of a semester, an assessment of W (Withdrawn) is recorded and no credit is awarded. Occasionally an assessment of I (Incomplete) is used to signify that the work has not yet been completed.

An assessment of CR (Credit Awarded) is considered the equivalent of a B or better in a conventional grading system. The underlying assumption is that students at the graduate level should perform well, not just adequately. Therefore, an assessment of CR indicates substantial effort, productivity, and artistic progress.

CREDIT: The unit of credit at VCFA is the equivalent of the semester hour credit.

COURSE-SEMESTER DESCRIPTIONS: A brief description of the student's work each semester is contained in the "Course Comments" section of the transcript. Prior to the implementation of "Course Comments" a brief synopsis of the student's work was produced each semester and attached to the transcript (if applicable).

DUAL-GENRE AND EXTENDED DEGREE OPTIONS:

In addition to the traditional 4-semester programs, there are several dual-genre or extended degree options permitting students, under certain circumstances, to complete an additional semester or two in another genre/curriculum. These options are described in detail in the Student Handbook and on the College website.

TRANSFER CREDIT: The Writing programs may accept up to one semester's worth of transfer credits from another MFA in Writing program, subject to the transfer credit policies of the programs. The Visual Art program may accept up to one semester's worth of transfer credits from another MFA in Visual Art program, subject to the transfer credit policy of the program.

CALENDAR: Each semester is 6 months in length. Each semester begins with a 10-day residency period, followed by a 6-month off-campus period of self-designed study and studio practice under the guidance of faculty advisors and/or artist-teachers. Each student concludes his/her study with a final 10-day on-campus residency.

COURSE NUMBERING: Course numbers consist of a 3-letter subject code, followed by a 500- or 600-level course number indicating study at the graduate level.
